Silence of the Wolf

中英逐段对照译本

Thongchai Winichakul · Moments of Silence (2020) · Chapter 9

原文 PDF：Winichakul-SilenceWolf-2020.pdf｜英文与中文逐自然段对应，连续编号；原文图片仅在原始附件实际包含时保留。

[P001] 英文原文：

Earlier chapters explain how in a climate of reconciliation the perpetrators—the Wolf who devoured the Lamb in 1976—quieted down and in the 1980s and 1990s public perception of the incident changed, as evident in the occasional controversies about the massacre. We have seen the perpetrators' evasiveness and belittlement of the tragedy, of the number of deaths, and their denial of it. What did these behaviors tell us about the memory of the perpetrators of the 1976 massacre? Did they hide their memories behind their silence and evasiveness? In what ways and to what extent were they affected by the public and chronopolitics of memory? This chapter shows that by the first half of the 2000s, most of these right-wing perpetrators remained unrepentant, but their triumphal discourse was kept quietly among themselves. Many felt betrayed by the society for casting them as the bad people. Some seemed to forget the past, or tried to, and let go; some changed their memories in order to move on with their lives. But at least one of them hinted that he would do it again, if need be, to protect the monarchy; he claimed to speak for the Thai people.

中文译文：

前几章解释了，在和解的氛围中，施害者——1976年吞噬羔羊的‘狼’——如何安静下来，以及1980和1990年代公众对这起事件的看法如何变化，这从偶尔出现的屠杀争议中便可看出。我们已看到施害者怎样闪烁其词、淡化这场悲剧及死亡人数，乃至否认事件。这些行为告诉我们什么有关1976年屠杀施害者记忆的事情？他们是否把记忆藏在沉默与回避背后？公众与记忆的时间政治如何影响他们，又影响到什么程度？本章表明，到2000年代上半叶，大多数右翼施害者依然毫无悔意，但只在私下维持着胜利者的话语。许多人觉得社会把他们塑造成坏人，是对他们的背叛。有些人似乎忘记了过去，或试着忘记并放下；有些人则改变自己的记忆，以便继续生活。但其中至少有一人暗示，为保护君主制，如有必要他还会再做一次；他自称代表泰国人民。

[P002] 英文原文：

The research for this chapter involved both documents and interviews with these former right-wing figures in the first half of the 2000s.1 A few disclaimers are warranted. First, even though the interviews were conducted as professionally as I could manage, I cannot pretend that I was free from bias. I insist that when I did the interviews and today, I have moved beyond my anger and animosity and do not have the slightest desire for revenge. But I cannot deny that my interpretations of their words, even their body language, may contain bias. Second, I told all the interviewees that I was one of the student leaders in 1976. Only two of them failed to recognize me. I also told them about this planned English-language book. Their preparation for the encounters, their responses to my questions, even our casual chats, probably took place with the awareness that their former opponent was writing a book about the massacre. Some people, such as the two Thammasat University professors, declined my requests for interviews because they knew who I was. In addition, a senior police officer at first agreed to an interview, then changed his mind once we met in person and he realized who I was. Had the interviewer been somebody else, the encounters and the responses from these people might have been different. Nonetheless, some of them shared their thoughts and memories with me in ways that they might not have done with other interviewers. Uthan Sanidvongse, the broadcaster of Yan Kro, prepared for his encounter with me, the former radical. It was a privilege to do these unique interviews that others could not.

中文译文：

本章研究既使用文件，也使用2000年代上半叶对这些昔日右翼人物的访谈。1 有必要先作几项说明。第一，尽管我尽可能专业地进行访谈，我无法假装自己毫无偏见。我坚持认为，无论访谈当时还是今天，我都已超越愤怒与敌意，没有一丝复仇的欲望。但我不能否认，自己对他们言语乃至肢体语言的解读可能存在偏见。第二，我告诉所有受访者，自己是1976年的学生领袖之一。只有两人没有认出我。我也告诉他们自己正在计划写这本英文书。他们为见面所做的准备、对我提问的回答，甚至日常闲谈，很可能都基于这样的认知：昔日的对手正在写一本关于屠杀的书。有人因此拒绝采访，例如法政大学的两位教授。一位高级警官最初同意采访，但我们见面、他认出我之后就改变了主意。如果采访者换成别人，这些接触及回答可能会不同。不过，也正因为我是我，他们中的一些人才以其他采访者未必能得到的方式，向我分享想法与回忆。‘装甲部队广播’（Yan Kro）的播音员乌坦·萨尼旺（Uthan Sanidvongse）也为与昔日激进分子——我——见面作了准备。能进行这些别人无法进行的独特访谈，是一种难得的机会。

[P003] 英文原文：

I admit to the limits as to how much I can understand these perpetrators of the massacre, these people who took part in the brutal killing of many people I knew. At times I did not want to understand them or care to know them better. A few times, however, I felt the opposite—a sympathy for some of them, especially the Red Gaurs.2 I sought neither truth nor accountability for what they did or did not do on October 6, 1976. Nor did I seek reconciliation with them. In his effort to understand the ordinary Germans who took part in the Holocaust, Primo Levi once said, “Perhaps one cannot, what is more, one must not, understand what happened . . . because to understand is almost to justify.” Tzevtan Todorov speculates that this dilemma led Levi to commit suicide.3 Similarly, the dilemma for me was that to truly understand their thinking and memories comes perilously close to justifying their thoughts and actions. At that point, my intellectual curiosity shut down and refused to know them more because I did not want to do so. As a consequence, the analysis of perpetrator memories that follows may not, I admit, always probe as deeply as it could.

中文译文：

我承认，自己能够在多大程度上理解这些屠杀施害者——这些参与残酷杀害许多我认识的人的人——是有限的。有时我不想理解他们，也不在乎是否更了解他们。然而，有几次我有相反的感受：对其中一些人，尤其是‘红牛’组织（Red Gaurs），产生了同情。2 我既没有追问他们在1976年10月6日做过或没做过什么的真相与责任，也没有寻求与他们和解。普里莫·莱维（Primo Levi）试图理解参与大屠杀的普通德国人时曾说：‘或许人们不能理解所发生的事情；更重要的是，人们不应当理解……因为理解几乎等于为之辩护。’茨维坦·托多罗夫（Tzevtan Todorov）推测，这一困境使莱维走向自杀。3 同样，对我而言，真正理解这些人的思想与记忆，危险地接近于为他们的思想和行为辩护。到这一点，我的求知欲就戛然而止，拒绝继续了解他们，因为我不愿这样做。因此，我承认，下面对施害者记忆的分析，未必总能深入到原本可能达到的程度。

[P004] Encounters with the Perpetrators

中文译文：与施害者相遇

[P005] 英文原文：

The number of serious studies on the right-wing movement is small. Benedict Anderson writes a historical sociological analysis about the new lower-middle class who changed from the supporters of the student uprising against the military in 1973 to defenders of the establishment under threat from radical students by 1976.4 Prajak Kongkirati explains the political conditions in which the movement emerged and succeeded, thanks to the effective organization and the fragmentation and inaction of the authorities.5 Neither of them examines any particular group. David Morell and Chai-anan Samudavanija as well as Paul Handley provide excellent general backgrounds of these particular groups.6 Katherine Bowie has written an excellent study on the Village Scouts from its history and role in the counterinsurgency to its indoctrinating mass mobilization.7 Charles Keyes produced the only study of the notorious anticommunist monks.8 Surprisingly, no study has been undertaken on the Red Gaurs, whose name often becomes the generic one for the whole right-wing movement.9 Even though the Internal Security Operation Command (ISOC), the anticommunist agency, may be the mastermind of these groups, as discussed in chapter 2, no study has yet looked into the creation and operations of these groups.10

中文译文：

对右翼运动的严肃研究数量很少。本尼迪克特·安德森（Benedict Anderson）从历史社会学角度分析了新兴中下层阶级：他们在1973年支持学生反抗军方的起义，到1976年则转而在激进学生的威胁下保卫统治建制。4 普拉贾克·孔吉拉蒂（Prajak Kongkirati）解释了右翼运动兴起并取得成功的政治条件，包括其有效的组织、当局的分裂与不作为。5 但两人都没有考察某一个具体团体。大卫·莫雷尔（David Morell）与猜阿南·沙穆达瓦尼贾（Chai-anan Samudavanija），以及保罗·汉德利（Paul Handley），为这些团体提供了出色的总体背景。6 凯瑟琳·鲍伊（Katherine Bowie）对‘乡村童军’（Village Scouts）进行了卓越研究，涉及其历史、在反叛乱中的作用和灌输意识形态的大规模动员。7 查尔斯·凯斯（Charles Keyes）完成了唯一一项关于臭名昭著的反共僧人的研究。8 令人惊讶的是，尚无人研究‘红牛’，尽管这个名称经常被泛指整个右翼运动。9 如第2章所述，虽然反共机构内部安全行动指挥部（Internal Security Operation Command，ISOC）可能是这些团体的幕后策划者，至今却没有研究考察这些团体的创建与运作。10

[P006] 英文原文：

Although many of the perpetrators covered in this chapter were public figures who were notorious for their views and actions, many of those I interviewed and who are discussed here were ordinary people unknown to the public. My research on the memories of the rightwing perpetrators began with an interview in 2000 with Somsak Khwanmongkhol (Somsak K), one of the leaders of the Red Gaurs. He repeated almost everything he had already said and published in 1996.11 Nothing he said was new. Perhaps a public figure like him, who had run for election a few times since the late 1990s, has to stick with what is part of the public record. I then turned my search toward individuals who were not public figures in the 2000s, regardless of their prominence in 1976. Based on the testimonies to police mentioned in chapter 3, I selected about thirty of those who had offered damaging information against the students, then tracked them down for interviews. Many could no longer be traced, and many turned down my requests. Eventually I talked to about ten of them. None of TU’s alleged right-wing professors agreed to speak with me. One said that she did not even know that there had been a massacre until recently—a blatant lie, probably a gesture of contempt. A few of them were willing and eager to talk, especially the leader of the goons, who even helped arrange a meeting with a leader of the Red Gaurs who had not been among the police witnesses. A notorious journalist from Dao sayam, who also had not been among the police witnesses, also agreed to talk. I also spoke with spies of the army who had given testimonies to the police as well as with a few police officers. The most intriguing encounter I had was the meeting with the broadcaster general, who had orchestrated the deadly propaganda.

中文译文：

虽然本章谈到的不少施害者是以言行臭名昭著的公众人物，但我采访并在此讨论的很多人只是公众不认识的普通人。2000年，我对‘红牛’一位领袖颂萨·宽蒙坤（Somsak Khwanmongkhol，下称Somsak K）的访谈，开启了我对右翼施害者记忆的研究。他几乎重复了自己在1996年说过并发表过的所有内容。11 没有一句新话。也许像他这样自1990年代末数次参加选举的公众人物，必须坚持已经公开记录的说法。此后，我把寻找对象转向2000年代不再是公众人物的人，不论他们在1976年多么显赫。我根据第3章提到的警方证词，选出约三十名曾经提供对学生不利材料的人，追踪他们并请求访谈。许多人已无从查找，还有许多人拒绝。最终，我与其中大约十人交谈。法政大学被指持右翼立场的教授中，无一人同意受访。有一位甚至说自己直到最近才知道曾发生过屠杀——这显然是谎言，可能是表示轻蔑的一种姿态。另有几人愿意甚至热衷于交谈，尤其是流氓团体的首领，他还帮忙安排我与一名未列入警方证人的‘红牛’领袖见面。一位恶名昭彰的《Dao sayam》记者虽然也不是警方证人，却同意接受访谈。我还访问了曾向警方提供证词的军方间谍和几位警官。最引人入胜的一次会面，是与策划致命宣传的那位广播将军。

[P007] 英文原文：

The person I wanted to meet most was Chair Guy, the dark-complexioned man who had wielded a folded chair to beat the body hanging from the tree. He also appeared to have taken part in two other heinous actions that morning, putting more papers into the flames that burned four bodies, and sitting on the body of the unconscious naked female. It was not clear whether he initiated those actions or simply joined them. Based on their testimonies to the police, I suspected one person might be him. I met that person but he was not Chair Guy. I also showed photographs of him to the leaders of the Red Gaurs and the goons and the army spies, asking whether they knew Chair Guy. None did.

中文译文：

我最想见的人是‘折椅男’（Chair Guy），那个肤色较深、挥舞折叠椅殴打吊在树上的尸体的男人。他似乎还参与当天早上的另外两项骇人行为：向焚烧四具尸体的火堆添纸，以及坐在一名昏迷、裸体女子的身上。尚不清楚他是发起这些行为，还是只是参与其中。根据向警方作出的证词，我怀疑某个人可能就是他。我见到了那个人，但他不是‘折椅男’。我也把此人的照片出示给‘红牛’和流氓团体的领袖以及军方间谍，询问他们是否认识‘折椅男’。没有人认识。

[P008] 英文原文：

By the early 2000s, these former perpetrators looked back at the massacre from various perspectives related to both their hindsight and their interests in the present. Many of them raised interesting issues regarding how the perpetrators had struggled with their memories of the massacre when their past actions were no longer seen as heroic or triumphant, but simply despicable.

中文译文：

到2000年代初，这些昔日施害者从各不相同的角度回顾屠杀，这些角度既与事后认识有关，也与当下利益有关。他们中的许多人提出了耐人寻味的问题：当过去的行为不再被视为英雄壮举或胜利，而只是卑劣行为时，施害者如何努力应对自己关于屠杀的记忆。

[P009] The Betrayed Red Gaurs

中文译文：感到被背叛的‘红牛’成员

[P010] 英文原文：

People think the Red Gaurs were responsible [for the killing on October 6]. They think we were bad guys. It is bitter for me. No government since then ever tried to bring the real killers and the masterminds to justice. The Red Gaurs were the easy target. We bore the burden of blame and stigma because people think we did it. [The real perpetrators] have hidden their wrongdoings by making the Red Gaurs the scapegoats. We have children. I have children. My daughter knows that I am a Red Guar. I am dejected by how she feels about me. How could I explain to my daughter when society judged that I am a bad guy? We became the victims of the society. (RG1, a former leader of the Red Gaurs group, June 21, 2006)

中文译文：

‘人们以为是‘红牛’［在十月六日实施杀戮］。他们以为我们是坏人。这使我非常痛苦。此后没有一届政府试图把真正的杀人者和幕后策划者绳之以法。‘红牛’是最容易攻击的目标。因为人们觉得事情是我们干的，我们背负了指责与污名。［真正的施害者］以‘红牛’为替罪羊，掩盖自己的罪行。我们有孩子。我也有孩子。我女儿知道我是‘红牛’成员。想到她怎么看我，我就很沮丧。当社会已认定我是坏人，我该怎么向女儿解释？我们反倒成了社会的受害者。’（RG1，‘红牛’组织昔日领袖，2006年6月21日）

[P011] 英文原文：

Most writings on the massacre in Thai or English blame the Red Gaurs for the crimes that morning to the extent that the group’s name has become emblematic for all perpetrators of the massacre. All members of the Red Gaurs I met, despite the bitter relations among them today, unanimously denied any deadly actions on October 6.12 General Sutsai Hatsadin, the “Father” of the group, had denied culpability before, but more than likely no one believed him.13 We may dismiss their denial, but I sensed that they might be telling the truth. They admitted that they threw homemade explosives and fired shots into TU during the night to intimidate the demonstrators, hoping that doing so would scare people and deter people from joining the protest, similar to what they had done at previous demonstrations. They did not consider their actions during the night as a contribution to the eventual massacre. They insisted that they did not intend to kill because they did not get the order to kill. One of them bragged that they might have killed the protesters had they gotten an order to do so—but they did not. All those I met had been taken aback by the brutality they witnessed. Sutsai said it went way too far, was horrifying.14 Somsak K recounted how that morning he had been roaming around outside the campus but did not do anything. A few people were angry with him for his inaction.15 Sutsai said similarly that some Red Gaurs were at TU to help the police in small ways but did not play any important role and did not take part in the killing. He identified those who killed as those “thugs, the Bat 500 group, who are bad people.”16 According to his son, Sutsai was surprised by the violence that morning.17 Those I met said the same; one went even further, saying that once the heavy shooting began and violence intensified, they realized that the situation had escalated beyond the order they had received (to disturb the demonstration). They then retreated to Sutsai’s residence. Only a few remained and did so by their own choice.

中文译文：

大多数关于屠杀的泰文或英文著作，都把那天早上的罪行归咎于‘红牛’，以至于该团体名称成为所有屠杀施害者的代称。我见过的‘红牛’成员尽管如今彼此关系恶劣，却一致否认在十月六日参与任何致命行动。12 该组织的‘父亲’素赛·哈萨丁将军（Sutsai Hatsadin）过去就否认过罪责，但很可能没有人相信。13 我们可以不相信他们的否认，但我感觉他们或许说的是真话。他们承认，那天夜里向法政大学投掷自制炸弹并开枪，是为了恐吓示威者，希望吓走人们、阻止其他人参加抗议，就像此前在别的示威中所做的一样。他们不认为自己夜间的行为促成了最终屠杀。他们坚称没有打算杀人

，因为没有收到杀人命令。其中一人夸口说，如果接到命令，他们或许会杀死抗议者——但他们没有接到。每个我见过的人都对目睹的残酷行为感到震惊。素赛说，事情远远过了头，令人恐惧。14 颂萨K回忆，那天早上他一直在校园外徘徊，却什么也没做，还有几个人因他的不作为而生气。15 素赛也说，某些‘红牛’成员当时在法政大学以小规模方式协助警方，但没有发挥重要作用，也未参与杀戮。他将杀人者称为‘那些暴徒，Bat 500那伙人，他们是坏人’。16 据其儿子说，素赛对那天早上的暴力感到意外。17 我遇到的成员也这样说；其中一人更进一步表示，激烈枪击开始、暴力升级时，他们意识到局势已超出所接受的命令（扰乱示威）的范围，因此撤回素赛的住所。只有少数人留在现场，而且是自愿留下。

[P012] 英文原文:

The Red Gaurs' accounts could have been orchestrated to such an extent that they actually became their individual memories. Thus their words may not be trustworthy. Nevertheless, the substance of their accounts was corroborated by their fellow right-wing Patriotic Goons. In a meeting with the latter, they bragged about their heroic attacks at TU even as they mocked and ridiculed RG1 (one of the known leaders of the Red Gaurs in 1976) for doing nothing but retreating to Sutsai's home. Every Red Gaur I met bemoaned the fact that the name Red Gaurs, which they were proud of, had become synonymous with the killers of October 6. Sutsai's son showed strong resentment that people had accused his father and the group without knowing the truth. Those false allegations in their view had caused trouble for most of them. RG1 complained with obvious bitterness, "How could I explain to my daughter?" They felt betrayed by the public, who branded them criminals without trying to find the truth, and failed to recognize their contributions to help save the country from communism.

中文译文:

‘红牛’的叙述可能经过精心协调，以至于最终变成了每个人自己的记忆，因此他们的话未必可信。不过，他们叙述的核心内容得到了右翼同伴——‘爱国流氓’团体——的印证。我与后者会面时，他们一边夸耀自己袭击法政大学的英雄壮举，一边嘲笑RG1（1976年‘红牛’一位知名领袖）除了撤回素赛家里什么也没做。我遇到的每一位‘红牛’都哀叹，曾令他们骄傲的组织名称竟成了十月六日杀人者的代名词。素赛的儿子强烈不满人们在不知真相的情况下指责父亲和组织。他们认为，这些虚假指控给多数人带来了麻烦。RG1明显痛苦地抱怨：‘我该怎么向女儿解释？’他们认为，公众不试图弄清真相就给他们贴上罪犯标签，又不承认他们为拯救国家免于共产主义所作的贡献，是背叛了他们。

[P013] 英文原文：

Of those I met, bitterness was quite strong toward Sutsai's superior, the mastermind, who assigned these dirty jobs to them but left them on their own to take the blame. According to Sutsai's son, "a very highly superior person, whom I don't want to name, whom everybody respects, asked my father to take on an important assignment for the country." This person, he said, "has blood on his hands, yet remained highly respected and venerated, untouched by trouble. Why does my father [Sutsai] have to be tarnished until the end of his life? . . . It is not fair to him. The bastards who take all the rewards are in fact all stained by blood."18 The last sentence was repeated several times in the son's published interview. According to another Red Gaur I met, the mastermind has never been exposed to this day. Sutsai himself insisted on keeping the superior's name secret. Nevertheless, one of them agreed to name the mastermind, who he believed was also behind other right-wing groups. Many of them also named the main financiers of the Red Gaurs. None of the names was ever mentioned in relation to the massacre, let alone as sharing the blame.

中文译文：

在我见过的人当中，他们对素赛的上级——将这些肮脏任务交给他们、又让他们独自承担指责的幕后策划者——尤其愤懑。素赛的儿子说：‘一位地位极高、我不想透露姓名、人人都尊敬的人，要求我父亲承担一项对国家重要的任务。’他还说，这个人‘双手沾满鲜血，却依然备受尊崇，没有受到任何牵连。为什么我父亲［素赛］必须污名缠身直到生命终结？……这对他不公平。那些拿走所有奖赏的混蛋，其实个个都沾了血。’18 最后一句话在儿子发表的访谈中反复出现。我认识的另一名‘红牛’成员说，幕后策划者直到今天也没有被揭露。素赛本人坚持不公开上级的名字。然而其中一人同意说出策划者的姓名，他相信此人还在其他右翼组织背后操纵。许多人还说出了‘红牛’主要资助人的名字。这些名字没有一个曾被联系到屠杀，更不必说共同承担责任了。

[P014] 英文原文：

They insisted that I (and readers of my book) must understand that they were merely pawns of the contesting power elite. So were radical students, they argued. We were the pawns who suffered. Somsak K and RG1 thought the brutality of the October 6 morning was excessive. Every Red Gaur I met in the early 2000s was "sympathetic" about the losses. To be precise, they were not sorry for what they did during the 1973 to 1976 period or the night before the massacre because those actions, in their view, were not part of the killings. No regret. No remorse. They still believed in their accomplishment—bringing society back on track and saving the country from communism.19 Despite their bitterness, most were proud for what they regarded as their Pid thong lang phra (thankless) role. To be more precise, they saw themselves as sacrificial lambs.

中文译文：

他们坚持要求我（以及本书读者）明白，自己只是相互争权的权力精英手中的棋子。他们说，激进学生也是一样。我们这些棋子才是受苦的人。颂萨K与RG1认为十月六日早上的暴行过于严重。我在2000年代初见到的每名‘红牛’都对损失表示‘同情’。确切地说，他们并不为自己在1973至1976年期间或屠杀前一夜做过的事道歉，因为在他们看来，那些行动不是杀戮的一部分。没有遗憾，也没有悔意。他们仍相信自己的成就——使社会回到正轨、拯救国家免受共产主义威胁。19 尽管满怀苦涩，多数人仍为自己所理解的 Pid thong lang phra（默默奉献却不获感激）的角色感到自豪。更准确地说，他们将自己看作被牺牲的羔羊。

[P015] The Patriotic Goons and Their Commander

中文译文：‘爱国流氓’及其指挥官

[P016] 英文原文：

The perpetrators who admitted taking part in the massacre were members of various small, lesser-known groups that earlier I called goons. Based on my conversations with them, especially their leader, I learned that they were loosely organized groups of unemployed or semi-employed hoodlums.20 These are the people Sutsai characterized as “thugs . . . bad people.” During 1975 and 1976, they took action under different group names, such as the Thai Bats (Khang khao thai), the Protector of the Thai Nation (Phu pokpong chat thai), The Thunder Bird 19 (Wihok saifa 19), and so on. These were the bold, fierce people who attacked TU in the early morning, storming into TU ahead of the police and sparking the massacre. Their leader, whom I call here the commander, was a navy captain who worked at ISOC. Three of the six whom I met, all retired military officers, were the organizers of these groups. According to them, ISOC financed the creation and operations of this deadly political machine.21

中文译文：

承认参与屠杀的施害者，是我此前称为‘流氓’的各种不太知名的小团体的成员。通过与他们、尤其是他们的领袖交谈，我了解到，他们是一些松散组织起来的失业或半就业的无赖。20 他们正是素赛所说的‘暴徒……坏人’。1975与1976年期间，他们以不同团体名称行动，例如‘泰国蝙蝠’（Thai Bats，Khang khao thai）、‘泰国保卫者’（Protector of the Thai Nation，Phu pokpong chat thai）、‘雷鸟19’（Thunder Bird 19，Wihok saifa 19），等等。这些勇猛凶狠的人在清晨袭击法政大学，先于警方冲入校园，触发了屠杀。我在这里称他们的领袖为‘指挥官’，他是一名在内部安全行动指挥部（ISOC）工作的海军上校。我遇到的六人中有三人是这些团体的组织者，且都是退役军官。据他们说，ISOC出资建立并运作这部致命的政治机器。21

[P017] 英文原文：

The commander confirmed that the Red Gaurs did not play any important role in the massacre. His people did. They boasted that they collaborated very well with the police. Mr. Samoe Oncharoon, who drove the bus that smashed the gates of TU, allowing the police and the hysterical right-wing crowd to storm in, was also a member of this group. According to his fellows, he did odd jobs on and off. But as one put it, he was “a genuine patriot who would sacrifice his life for the country.”22 He often volunteered to take action against students, such as obstructing the groups that put posters up around the city. On the afternoon of October 6, after the massacre, these people were also on the front line of the right-wing demonstrators against the Seni government. By the 2000s, these people still considered the October 6 incident their proudest accomplishment, one that had prevented the Vietnamese communists from taking over Thailand. The shift in public perception of the massacre in the 1980s and 1990s seemed to have no effect on their views and memories. Unlike the Red Gaurs, I heard no complaints from these people, who remained cheerful about their victory in 1976.

中文译文：

指挥官证实，‘红牛’在屠杀中没有发挥重要作用，真正参与的是他的人。他们夸耀自己与警方合作得非常好。驾驶公共汽车撞开法政大学大门、让警方和狂热右翼人群冲入的沙默·翁乍伦先生（Samoe Oncharoon）也是这个团体的成员。据其同伙说，他不时打些零工。但正如一人所说，他是‘愿意为国家牺牲生命的真正爱国者’。22 他经常自愿参与针对学生的行动，例如阻挠在城市各处张贴海报的团体。十月六日屠杀后的下午，这些人也站在反对社尼政府的右翼示威者最前列。直到2000年代，他们仍认为十月六日事件是自己最自豪的成就，因为它阻止了越南共产主义者接管泰国。1980和1990年代公众对屠杀看法的转变，似乎丝毫没有影响他们的观点与记忆。与‘红牛’不同，我没有听到他们抱怨什么，他们仍为1976年的胜利兴高采烈。

[P018] 英文原文：

The commander, who taught courses on communism and world politics for senior military officers at ISOC, also wrote a book about the October incidents of 1973 and 1976.23 In his view, the assassinations and violence against students in those years were the result of the conflict between the China-CPT alliance on the one hand, and the Soviet Union–Vietnam alliance on the other. The former was responsible for most cases. The killings on October 6 were exacerbated by them too, he wrote, whereas his group only tried to help the police end the demonstration. When I showed them the picture of Chair Guy and asked whether they knew who he was, the commander responded at once without looking at the photo, “he was CPT.” In my opinion, his response was absurd, to put it politely. Even RG1, who was invited by the commander to join our conversation, told me afterward that he did not believe it. However, his analysis of the violence of those years was not absurd for many right-wing elements at the time. A similar line of thought was circulated among the anticommunist agencies around 1975 and 1976 and was also propagated by military propaganda. In his testimony to the police after the massacre, for example, Uthan of Yan Kro offered an assessment of the political situation that led to the massacre that was similar to the commander’s view.24 Samson Lim is perhaps right in arguing that Thais typically see the large context of history or a historical epoch in conspiratorial terms, as the course of action is instigated and controlled by somebody behind the scenes. Even the Thai state is typically paranoid that it is the victim of a mysterious hand.25

中文译文：

这位指挥官在内部安全行动指挥部向高级军官教授共产主义与世界政治课程，也写过一本关于1973年和1976年十月事件的书。23 在他看来，那几年针对学生的暗杀和暴力，源于一边是中国—泰国共产党联盟，另一边是苏联—越南联盟之间的冲突。前者对大多数案件负有责任。他写道，十月六日的杀戮

也是被这些势力激化的，而他的团体只是在帮助警方结束示威。当我给他看‘折椅男’的照片、问他是否知道这是谁时，他甚至没看照片就立即回答：‘他是泰共的人。’委婉地说，我认为这一回答荒谬至极。连指挥官请来参加谈话的RG1也在事后告诉我，他不相信这种说法。不过，在当时许多右翼分子看来，他对那几年暴力的分析并不荒谬。类似思路在1975和1976年前后的反共机构中流传，也由军方宣传推广。例如，屠杀后‘装甲部队广播’的乌坦向警方作证时，对导致屠杀的政治局势作出了与指挥官相似的评估。24 萨姆森·林（Samson Lim）或许说得对：泰国人常用阴谋论理解历史的大背景或某一历史时代，认为事件进程由幕后某人煽动和控制。就连泰国国家也常陷于一种偏执，觉得自己是神秘黑手的受害者。25

[P019] 英文原文：

The commander commented that the public now blamed the right-wing groups because they were ignorant, misguided into thinking that the 1973 uprising and the 1976 massacre were part of the struggles for democracy. He believed that Thailand was currently (in 2006) under the influence of the leftists again, though the situation was not as dangerous as in the 1970s. In his opinion, the real threat to Thailand today is capitalism and the United States. Here it should be noted that during the interviews with the Red Gaurs in 2006, I asked them who or what the most dangerous threat to Thailand was nowadays. Most of them said capitalism and the United States. One of them remarked jokingly that he should have listened to the leftists and joined us in fighting US imperialism in the old days.

中文译文：

指挥官评论说，如今公众责怪右翼团体，是因为他们无知，被误导着认为1973年的起义和1976年的屠杀属于民主斗争的一部分。他相信泰国当时（2006年）再次处于左翼影响下，尽管情况不像1970年代那么危险。他认为，当今泰国真正的威胁是资本主义和美国。这里值得指出，2006年采访‘红牛’时，我也问他们，如今对泰国最危险的威胁是谁或是什么。多数人回答资本主义与美国。其中一人开玩笑地说，早年他本该听左翼的话，和我们一道反对美帝国主义。

[P020] The Corporal-Healer

中文译文：下士兼治疗师

[P021] 英文原文：

One of the active Patriotic Goons was in fact an army corporal who had been assigned to collect information about student activities during the seventies. He instead joined the actions of the goon group on many occasions.26 He later found a more lucrative career as a traditional healer, hence I call him the corporal-healer. I met him at his huge, lavish home office. In those days, he and his cohorts looked for chances for minor attacks on student activists, such as damaging their vehicles or disrupting their activities. He claimed to know Samoe very well and told a story with a big laugh about how he and Samoe had once dumped a bucket of glue onto a student activist. To this day, he remained proud of what he had done.

中文译文：

‘爱国流氓’中的一名活跃分子其实是陆军下士，1970年代被派去搜集学生运动的信息，却在许多场合转而参加流氓团体的行动。26 后来他找到了一份更赚钱的职业，成为传统治疗师，因此我称他为‘下士兼治疗师’。我在他那座宽敞而奢华的家庭办公室见到他。那时候，他和同伙寻找机会对学生活动者进行小规模攻击，例如破坏车辆或扰乱活动。他声称非常了解沙默，并大笑着讲述自己有一次和沙默把一桶胶水倒在一名学生活动者身上的故事。直到今天，他依然为自己所做的一切感到自豪。

[P022] 英文原文：

The corporal-healer boasted about being in the lead group that raided TU, an account he told with joy and excitement, as if recounting an action movie. There was no regret, no empathy for the victims, even today. In his testimony to the police in 1976, he was one of the few who claimed to witness many of the ugliest actions. I eagerly sought him out because I thought that he could be Chair Guy. He was not. However, I was surprised that he did not claim to have witnessed those terrible actions at all during our interview. He only described the confusion, people’s anger at students inside TU, the mob attacks on some students who tried to escape, and a few descriptions of the incident that were common public knowledge. Nothing seemed to reflect his eyewitness experience or any unique individual memories. Perhaps he had forgotten that, according to his testimony to the police, he had seen with his own eyes the hanging and other horrendous actions. Perhaps he never actually witnessed them but compiled them from what he had heard and read in the newspapers to make up a dramatic eyewitness account for the police in the wake of the massacre. After all, at the time such actions were considered heroic. His alleged personal account served his super-sized ego well. He insisted, however, that he did not kill or assault anyone—an underperformance given his bragging about how he had engaged with students so many times before that day.

中文译文：

‘下士兼治疗师’夸耀自己是冲入法政大学的先头队伍一员。他兴奋、快乐地讲述此事，仿佛在复述一部动作电影。即使到了今天，他也毫无悔意，对受害者没有丝毫同情。1976年向警方作证时，他是少数声称亲眼目睹过多项最丑恶行为的人之一。我急切地想找到他，因为我以为他可能就是‘折椅男’。但他不是。然而，让我惊讶的是，在采访中他完全没有声称自己见过那些可怕的行为。他只描述混乱、民众对法政大学内学生的愤怒、暴民袭击试图逃离的学生，以及几项早已成为公众常识的事件细节。似乎没有任何东西反映他的亲眼见闻或独特的个人记忆。也许他忘了自己曾在警方证词中说亲眼见过绞刑和其他恐怖行为。也许他实际上从未看见这些事，只是汇集报纸上读到和听来的材料，在屠杀后为警方编造了戏剧化的目击证词。毕竟，这些行为在当时被视为英雄壮举。所谓个人目击记述正好满足了他膨胀的自我。不过他坚称自己没有杀害或袭击任何人——考虑到他一再夸耀此前如何多次与学生发生冲突，这未免显得发挥失常。

[P023] 英文原文：

Nonetheless, one story from the corporal-healer has disturbed me to this day. On that day, just outside TU, he told me that while the shooting was going on, a student appeared unexpectedly, rushing angrily at him. Luckily for him, his partner, an army sergeant with a gun in hand, was there and shot the student at point blank range. He repeated the story several times with the same precise details, as if it were a funny story. In 2006, his partner was a colonel at the military cadet school who was in charge of preparing audiovisual instruments for Princess Sirindhorn, a professor at the school. Let us call him the intelligence sergeant. I had met him. But the shooting was not at all part of his memory of the massacre. Were the events of October 6 merely an embellished war story for the corporal-healer? Or did the intelligence sergeant lie? Or had they created and lived with false memories?

中文译文：

不过，‘下士兼治疗师’讲的一个故事至今仍让我不安。他告诉我，那一天，就在法政大学外面，枪击仍在进行时，一名学生突然出现，愤怒地冲向他。幸运的是，他的搭档——一名手持枪支的陆军中士——就在旁边，当即近距离向学生开枪。他数次重复这个故事，细节每次都一模一样，仿佛这是个笑话。2006年，他的搭档已是一名在军事学校任职的上校，负责为担任该校教授的诗琳通公主准备视听设备。我们称他为‘情报中士’。我见过此人。但开枪一事完全不在他关于屠杀的记忆之中。十月六日事件对‘下士兼治疗师’而言，只是一则经过添油加醋的战争故事吗？还是‘情报中士’撒了谎？抑或他们创造并一直生活在虚假记忆之中？

[P024] The Intelligence Sergeant

中文译文：情报中士

[P025] 英文原文：

On assignment to collect information, the intelligence sergeant was inside TU through the night of October 5 and outside it in the morning. According to him, he was not carrying any weapon that day. Besides, he and the corporal-healer had gone their separate ways early in the morning. He observed the situation at a distance from TU; the corporal-healer went to join the demonstration at the Equestrian Plaza. His memory contradicts not only the corporal-healer’s but also both of their testimonies in 1976, given that both of them told the police that they remained at TU the entire time until the crackdown was over.

中文译文：

情报中士奉命搜集情报，十月五日整夜都在法政大学内，次日上午则在校外。据他说，那天他没有携带任何武器。而且，他与‘下士兼治疗师’一大早就分头行动了。他在离法政大学较远处观察局势，‘下士兼治疗师’则前往皇家骑马广场（Equestrian Plaza）参加示威。他的记忆不仅与后者矛盾，也与两人在1976年给出的证词矛盾，因为两人当时均向警方表示，他们始终留在法政大学，直到镇压结束。

[P026] 英文原文：

The intelligence sergeant began his military career at the bottom and rose in the ranks through education. In 1973, according to his account, while serving in the army, he was also a part-time student who supported the uprising. Between 1973 and 1976, he often attended demonstrations of radical students as part of his job as an army spy. He was also assigned to help the operations of right-wing groups. Those assignments led him to several meetings with people from other security agencies, including the Santiban (political police), the National Security Council, and the ISOC. Among the people he met at those meetings were Sutsai and the goon commander and Chamlong Srimuang. He named a few leftist leaders he came to know very well as he infiltrated their organizations. He even once joined a meeting of the leftist leaders.

中文译文：

情报中士从军队最底层开始职业生涯，通过教育逐步晋升。他自述，1973年服役时，他同时也是一名支持起义的非全日制学生。1973至1976年，他作为军方间谍，经常参加激进学生的示威，也奉命协助右翼团体的行动。这些任务使他参加了数次与其他安全机关人员的会议，包括政治警察（Santiban）、国家安全委员会及内部安全行动指挥部（ISOC）。他在会上见到的人包括素赛、那位流氓指挥官及占隆·是孟（Chamlong Srimuang）。他还说出了几位左翼领袖的名字，称自己在渗透组织时与他们相当熟悉，甚至曾参加过一次左翼领袖的会议。

[P027] 英文原文：

The sergeant was open and politically opinionated. His views on most issues were more complex and he was more of an intellectual than other right-wing individuals I met. Indeed our conversation about Thai politics in the past and present was amicable because he was somewhat liberal in the Thai context. The intelligence sergeant learned about communism partly from the commander during those meetings in 1975 and 1976 and later at the Command and General Staff College, where the latter taught. He said he was not convinced at all by the commander’s analysis of Thai politics in the mid-1970s as the contest of the two communist alliances. He giggled when he summarized the commander’s analysis to me. Yet he repeated several times that he had met a Soviet agent among the leftists. Although he thought that the communist threat to Thailand was real given the communist revolutions in 1975, he did not believe that Vietnam planned to invade Thailand. He agreed with students at the time, however, that there should be no US military bases on Thai soil. He did not believe that students wanted Thailand to become communist or wanted to abolish the monarchy. Unlike most other right-wing elements at the time, he did not consider Puey to be a communist, nor did he believe that weapons were stockpiled at TU. The conflict between the left and the right in Thailand, in short, was primarily the differences of political ideas, therefore—he said unequivocally several times during the interview—assassinations and violent crackdowns, including that of October 6, were wrong. In retrospect, he said, he became more frustrated by right-wing factions because, “we did not speak the truth.” He felt deceived, that he had been misled into serving a bad political purpose. At the time, he said, he started feeling conflict within himself too. But he was young and naïve, so he took for granted that senior officers knew best, and that he should follow them. By 2006, he no longer believed them.

中文译文：

这名中士坦率直言，政治观点鲜明。他对多数议题的看法更加复杂，知识素养也胜过我遇到的其他右翼人物。事实上，我们关于泰国过去与当前政治的谈话十分友好，因为按泰国的标准，他具有某种自由主义倾向。情报中士有一部分共产主义知识来自1975和1976年会议上的那位指挥官，以及后来在指挥官任教的指挥参谋学院学习时的接触。他说，自己完全不信服指挥官把1970年代中期的泰国政治分析为两大共产主义联盟之间的竞争。他向我概述这番分析时还咯咯发笑。不过，他数次重复说，自己

曾在左翼人士中遇见过一名苏联特工。尽管他认为考虑到1975年的共产主义革命，泰国受到的共产主义威胁是真实的，但他不相信越南计划入侵泰国。他却同意当时学生的立场，即泰国领土上不应有美军基地。他不认为学生想把泰国变为共产主义国家，也不认为他们要废除君主制。与当时大多数右翼人士不同，他既不认为浦是共产主义者，也不相信法政大学藏有武器。简言之，在他看来，泰国左右两派的冲突主要是政治观念不同，因此——他在采访中多次毫不含糊地表示——暗杀与暴力镇压，包括十月六日的行动，都是错误的。回过头看，他说自己越来越对右翼派别感到挫败，因为‘我们没有讲真话’。他觉得自己受了骗，被误导去服务一个恶劣的政治目的。他说自己当时也开始感到内心冲突。但那时他年轻、天真，理所当然地认为高级军官最懂得是非，自己应该听从。到了2006年，他已不再相信他们。

[P028] 英文原文：

Regarding the massacre, the intelligence sergeant said he had followed the students' protests closely since October 4. He witnessed the hanging skit, too, but from a distance. He did not believe the students intended to send any message about the crown prince. On the night of October 5, he went to TU with the corporal-healer. He recalled that he had seen the Red Gaurs gathered a block away from TU. In the morning, after the situation had worsened, he retreated to observe from the opposite side of Sanamluang from TU, where he could only hear the sound of shooting from both sides. The corporal-healer left him at this point, going to the Equestrian Plaza. The intelligence sergeant himself stayed put until the shooting was over. After that, he walked toward the campus again. He saw the hangings and the burning of people after the actions were already over. He lamented out loud to people at the hanging site, “Disgusting. How can anyone do this?” He did not care whether his outburst upset the crowd. Apparently his recollection was vivid. Throughout that morning, he just observed quietly from a distance and did not take any action, let alone a heroic one. Speaking in 2006, he believed that someone must have been behind the whole incident but he did not know who. He did not understand why such violence was needed. He did not mention the incident related by the corporal-healer.

中文译文：

谈到屠杀，情报中士说，他从十月四日起就密切关注学生抗议。他也看见了模拟绞刑的短剧，不过距离较远。他不相信学生是要借此表达任何有关王储的信息。十月五日夜里，他与‘下士兼治疗师’一起前往法政大学。他记得看见‘红牛’在离学校一个街区外集合。次日早上，局势恶化后，他撤到皇家田广场（Sanamluang）与法政大学相对的一侧观察，只能听见双方射击的声音。‘下士兼治疗师’这时离开他，前往皇家骑马广场。情报中士本人一直留在那里，直到枪声结束。之后他重新走向校园。他看见吊尸和焚烧人的场面时，那些行为已经结束。他在吊尸现场向人们大声哀叹：‘太恶心了。人怎么能做这种事？’他并不在意自己的愤怒是否惹恼人群。显然，这段回忆在他脑中十分鲜明。那天整个上午，他只是在远处安静地观察，没有采取任何行动，更别说什么英雄行为了。2006年谈及往事时，他相信整个事件背后必然有人策划，却不知道是谁；他不理解为何需要这样的暴力。他没有提起‘下士兼治疗师’所讲的那起枪击。

[P029] 英文原文：

His account to the police in 1976, however, was that he had wandered near TU the entire time and had witnessed the lynching of one student whose face looked like a Yuan (Vietnamese). When I asked him whether he had ever talked to the police or reported to his superior about what he had witnessed, he categorically denied ever talking to the police. His superior did not question him because the incident was over. If any testimony by him exists, he argued, “the police probably made it up by themselves,” this despite his signature at the foot of every page of the testimony. It is hard to believe that the police would make up the testimony of a real person given that the person could be called to testify at the trial. However, as we will see, I found two other people who also denied ever giving testimony to the police in 1976.

中文译文：

然而，他1976年向警方作出的证词却称，自己整段时间都在法政大学附近徘徊，还目睹了一名面容像‘元’（Yuan，即越南人）的学生被私刑杀害。我问他是否曾向警方或上级报告自己的见闻，他断然否认曾与警方谈过。他说上级没有问他，因为事件已经结束。如果存在署名为他的证词，他辩称，‘大概是警方自己编造的’，尽管证词每一页底部都留有他的签名。考虑到证词提供者可能被传唤到庭上作证，很难相信警方会凭空编造一名真实人物的证词。不过，正如稍后会看到的，我还遇到另两个人，同样否认在1976年曾向警方提供证词。

[P030] 英文原文：

Assuming that the intelligence sergeant gave testimony in 1976, the eyewitness accounts by both the healer and the sergeant may be entirely made up to satisfy a desire, especially on the healer’s side, to play a heroic part in the victory. Or, the sergeant might have been an eyewitness in 1976, whose testimony was basically true. In 2006, however, he tried to distance himself, literally and metaphorically, from the acts he had once thought heroic, thereby denying any action, even his testimony. Instead, he talked about the right-wing goons with expressive pity, even an insulting tone at times, and recalled his verbal defiance of the heinous acts, an act of incredible courage under the circumstances. It is also possible that he lied on both occasions to better position himself in different political environments. If any of the latter two scenarios was the case, his memory had warped significantly over the decades, purging quite a bit of the old memories, adding some, and dramatically remaking it in a new frame that fits his present incarnations.27

中文译文：

假定情报中士确实在1976年作了证，那么他和治疗师的目击叙述可能完全是编造的，以满足扮演胜利英雄的愿望，尤其是治疗师的愿望。也可能中士在1976年确实亲眼目击，证词大体属实，但到2006年，他试图在实际和象征意义上与自己昔日认为英勇的行为拉开距离，因而否认采取任何行动，甚至否认作证。相反，他带着明显的怜悯，有时甚至侮辱性的语气，谈论右翼流氓，并回忆自己当年曾言语反对那些骇人的行为——在当时条件下，这是难以置信的勇敢之举。还有一种可能：他两次都在撒谎，以便在不同政治环境中把自己放在更有利的位置。如果后两种情况中的任何一种成立，那么他的记忆在几十年间就发生了重大扭曲：大量旧记忆被清除，一些内容被加入，又在适合当下自我形象的新框架中被彻底重塑。27

[P031] 英文原文：

The alteration of one’s memory is not necessarily a deceptive and conscious process. It is quite possible that he was discomfited by his past and needed to recalibrate in order to live on in the present time with self-pride. As a result, he did not feel betrayed by Thai society; instead, he felt deceived and used by his superiors to take part in a malicious operation. Everyone modifies their memories, especially if more bearable fictions help one to live on with less haunting from the past. A society, too, needs to revisit its history from time to time, to make it “make sense” in the light of the present time. The sergeant’s changed memory was probably a microcosm of the collective memory of Thai society as a whole, which has been haunted by the memory of the massacre.

中文译文：

改变个人记忆未必是有意识的欺骗过程。他很可能因为自己的过去感到不安，需要重新调整记忆，才能在当下保有自尊地生活。因此，他不觉得泰国社会背叛了自己，反而觉得自己被上级欺骗和利用，被带入一场恶意行动。人人都会修改自己的记忆，尤其当更容易承受的虚构版本可以使人活下去、不再那么受往事纠缠时。社会也需要不时重新审视自己的历史，使之从当下的角度来看‘讲得通’。中士改变的记忆，很可能是整个泰国社会集体记忆的一个缩影；这个社会一直被关于屠杀的记忆所困扰。

[P032] 英文原文：

If the sergeant altered his memory in order to live his life, my confronting him to find out which memory was truthful or how much he had altered it might have opened up the old wounds he had tried to move beyond. I decided not to do so. The truth about the sergeant’s past and his memory would not especially enhance the value of this book. We have learned much from his case about the complexity of memories about the massacre, regardless what he actually did.

中文译文：

如果中士改变记忆是为了继续生活，那么我若逼问他究竟哪段记忆真实、改动了多少，就可能重新揭开他试图放下的旧伤。我决定不这样做。关于中士过去与记忆的真相，不会特别增加本书的价值。不论他事实上做过什么，我们已经从他的案例中了解到屠杀记忆的复杂性。

[P033] The Spy Journalist

中文译文：间谍记者

[P034] 英文原文：

A notorious journalist at Dao sayam also turned out to be an army agent tasked with collecting information via his networks and spreading certain information to the public. He revealed to me that in 1976 the army had spies in all the leading dailies, including Thairath, the best-selling daily in the country. Other journalists at Dao sayam, despite sharing his right-wing ideology, did not know that he was an army officer. As a journalist and an army intelligence officer, he had access to confidential information, which he boasted about to me. He mentioned several examples, such as a secret deal between the “most powerful person in the land” and the “three tyrants” in the October 1973 uprising that led to the latter’s exiles. After he was de-commissioned from the army, the spy journalist became a full-time staff member at one of the largest Thai associations of journalists.

中文译文：

《Dao sayam》一位臭名昭著的记者，原来也同时是军方特工，任务是通过自己的人脉搜集情报，并向公众传播特定信息。他向我透露，1976年军方在所有主要日报中都安插了间谍，包括全国销量最大的《泰叻报》（Thairath）。《Dao sayam》的其他记者虽然与他持相同右翼意识形态，却不知道他是一名军官。他兼具记者与军事情报官身份，能够接触机密情报，还向我夸耀这一点。他举出数个例子，例如在1973年十月起义中，‘这个国家最有权势的人’与‘三个暴君’之间达成秘密交易，导致后者流亡。退役后，这名间谍记者成为泰国一家最大记者协会的全职工作人员。

[P035] 英文原文：

In 1976, he was infamous among the radicals for his ultra-rightwing column, his shameless propagandizing, and his utter lack of journalistic professionalism. But the right-wing credited him with making Dao sayam the media platform for the Village Scout movement, particularly at critical moments. The spy journalist said that Dao sayam received the photo of the controversial skit but never had the film. He categorically denied that Dao sayam had tampered with the photo. Instead, he argued that it took a risk in publishing the photo because in doing so the paper could have been charged with lèse majesté as well. The editorial collective decided to publish it without any order from anyone else, not even his superior in the army. He still believed that the skit was part of the communists’ antimonarchy scheme and that the students intentionally mocked the crown prince. He strongly believed that Dao sayam did the right thing in exposing the scheme and instigating the reaction against the communists. However, he did not anticipate or expect the massacre.

中文译文：

1976年，他因极右翼专栏、毫不羞耻的宣传与完全缺乏新闻职业精神，而在激进活动者中恶名昭彰。但右翼赞赏他使《Dao sayam》成为‘乡村童军’运动的媒体平台，尤其在关键时刻发挥作用。他说，《Dao sayam》收到了争议短剧的照片，却从未拿到胶卷。他断然否认报纸篡改照片，反而辩称刊登照片本身冒了风险，因为报纸也可能因此遭控冒犯君主罪。编辑集体自行决定刊登，没有接到任何人的命令，连他军中的上级也没有下令。他依然相信，这个短剧属于共产主义者反君主制阴谋的一部分，学生有意嘲弄王储。他坚信《Dao sayam》揭露阴谋、煽动人们反对共产主义者是正确的。然而，他没有预料到，也不曾期待发生屠杀。

[P036] 英文原文：

The spy journalist was quite upset that the ignorant public had in subsequent decades put the blame on the right wing. Like the Red Gaurs, he was visibly bitter that their accomplishments were not remembered or recognized. He insisted that the students were armed and fired heavily at the police and the crowd, and that the police treated the arrested students very well, even protecting them from being lynched. Speaking as a spy, he said that no order had been given to kill the students. This was the same account of the incident and the same excuse broadcast on TV5 on that day. He also defended Salang Bunnak, saying that he had not attacked Puey but in fact tried to protect him at the airport. The spy journalist refused any responsibility for the massacre, even indirectly as a media-instigated atrocity. Nor did he regret or feel sorry for the dead. However, he was also not particularly proud or feel heroic about what he did. To him, the massacre was the result of complex conspiracies, conflicts, and deals among many political groups, including factions within the military and among the communists. It was “a nightmare” that everyone should let go of. Nevertheless, by 2000 when I interviewed him, he believed that Dao sayam’s role against the communists had been vindicated, as was his own role for the paper and for the Village Scout movement.

中文译文：

间谍记者对后来几十年无知的公众把责任归咎于右翼非常不满。他和‘红牛’成员一样，对他们的成就没有被记住或承认感到明显苦涩。他坚持说，学生持有武器，猛烈向警方和人群开火；警方对被捕学生非常好，甚至保护他们免受私刑。以间谍身份谈及此事时，他说没有接到任何杀害学生的命令。这与当日TV5电视台播出的事件叙述和借口完全相同。他也为沙朗·汶纳（Salang Bunnak）辩护，称沙朗没有在机场袭击浦，实际上是在保护他。间谍记者拒绝为屠杀承担任何责任，哪怕是媒体煽动暴行的间接责任；他也不为死者感到遗憾或悲伤。不过，他对自己的所作所为既不特别骄傲，也不觉得有多英雄气概。在他看来，屠杀是包括军方内部派别与共产主义者在内的许多政治团体之间复杂阴谋、冲突和交易的结果，是人人都该放下的‘噩梦’。然而，到2000年我采访他时，他相信《Dao sayam》当年反共的作用，以及他自己在报社和‘乡村童军’运动中的作用，已得到证明是正当的。

[P037] The Right-Wing Professors

中文译文：右翼教授

[P038] 英文原文：

As described in chapter 3, the right-wing professors at TU were committed to the anticommunist narrative of the massacre. In 2001, I made contact with two who were among the most notorious before October 6, 1976. The older one was the nominal leader of the group; the younger was its most active member. Their testimonies and the materials they submitted to the police in 1976 confirmed their notoriety given that they included vicious allegations against Puey for having been the mastermind of the communists within TU and in the labor movement. These two also claimed that they recognized right away that the controversial skit was indeed mocking the crown prince. On the night of October 5, they cooperated with Salang to file charges against the students, earning Salang's praise for their eagerness to act even in the middle of the night.28 According to Puey, these two professors also showed up at the airport when Puey was detained before leaving the country.29

中文译文：

如第3章所述，法政大学的右翼教授坚守关于屠杀的反共叙事。2001年，我与其中两位在1976年10月6日前最臭名昭著的人取得联系。年长者是该团体的名义领袖，年轻者是最活跃的成员。他们1976年交给警方的证词和材料印证了他们的恶名，因为其中包含恶毒指控，声称浦是法政大学内部及劳工运动中共产主义者的幕后策划者。两人还声称，自己一眼就认出争议短剧确实在嘲弄王储。十月五日夜间，她们与沙朗合作控告学生，沙朗还赞扬她们即便在深夜仍热衷于行动。28 据浦所说，在他离境前被扣留的机场，这两位教授也曾出现。29

[P039] 英文原文：

I wanted to find out whether they still maintained their testimony to the police that Puey and their opponents in TU were communists. If the chronopolitics of memory had changed their views, how would they explain their unfounded allegations of the past? How would the fact that Puey has become idolized nationally for his integrity and incorruptibility affect their views of him and of the past? Were they still proud of their actions in the past or did they feel betrayed like the Red Gaurs and the spy journalist?

中文译文：

我想知道，她们是否仍坚持自己向警方所作的证词，即浦及法政大学的对手是共产主义者。如果记忆的时间政治改变了她们的看法，她们会如何解释自己过去毫无根据的指控？如今浦因其正直与廉洁在全国受到推崇，这会怎样影响她们对他和对往事的看法？她们仍为过去的行动自豪，还是像‘红牛’与间谍记者一样感到被背叛？

[P040] 英文原文：

Unfortunately, both of them refused to talk. One gave me her reasons over the telephone. The country had been doing well. TU was back to being an academic institution rather than a bastion of the leftists, as in the 1970s. Talking about the past, she argued, was not helpful. We should care about the present and live for the future. The other professor complained that many people had misrepresented her as right wing. She in fact had supported the students in the 1973 uprising. She ended the conversation, also by telephone, saying that she had just learned not long ago that there had been killings at TU in 1976. Such comments signaled to me that I should not waste my time with her nonsense. I did not have the opportunity to ask either of them my questions. I can only guess that, just as the anticommunist ideology of the 1970s looks absurd nowadays, their memories and views of the past must have changed too. It is quite possible that they wished their past political actions at TU and on October 6, 1976, would fade quietly away from public view. Silence and evasiveness would have to serve instead.

中文译文：

遗憾的是，两人都拒绝交谈。其中一人通过电话解释了理由。国家发展得很好；法政大学重新成为学术机构，不再像1970年代那样是左翼堡垒。她认为谈论过去没有帮助，我们应关注当下、为未来生活。另一位教授抱怨许多人误把她称为右翼；事实上，她曾支持1973年起义中的学生。她同样在电话中结束谈话，说自己不久前才知道1976年法政大学发生过杀戮。这类评论让我意识到，不应该把时间浪费在她的胡言乱语上。我没有机会向任何一人提出问题。我只能猜测：正如1970年代的反共意识形态如今看来荒谬，她们对过去的记忆与观点想必也已改变。她们很可能希望自己在法政大学和1976年10月6日的政治行为，能够悄悄淡出公众视野。沉默与闪烁其词遂成为她们的应对方式。

[P041] Other Noteworthy Encounters

中文译文：其他值得注意的会面

[P042] 英文原文：

Numerous people I had managed to contact I failed to meet; numerous encounters did not produce any interesting results. Yet the missed opportunities are telling in various ways. For example, I had a telephone conversation with Salang Bunnak. Thanks to his outspoken character, Salang was a public figure who often commented on police matters and occasional national issues before and long after the massacre. He was an occasional guest on television programs and on the Yan Kro broadcast and was prominent on TV5 on the October 6 as well (see chapter 3). Over the telephone, he seemed willing to meet and talk because, in his opinion, the history of the massacre in the decades that followed had been altered and was full of lies. What he meant in particular was the accusation that he had assaulted Puey at the airport. According to him, he tried to protect Puey from the angry mob of Village Scouts by showing them that Puey had already received the harsh treatment he deserved. This excuse was exactly the same as he had given in public several times. I wanted to meet him to draw more out of him. Unfortunately, he could not find time and ultimately seemed uninterested in meeting me. In any case, such a public figure usually has a standard answer ready for all interviews, so I decided not to pursue it any further.30

中文译文：

我好不容易联系上的许多人，最终都没能见面；许多见面也没有产生有趣的结果。但这些错过的机会仍在不同方面说明问题。例如，我曾与沙朗·汶纳通电话。由于性格直言不讳，沙朗是公众人物，屠杀前后很长时间里都经常评论警务问题和偶尔出现的全国性议题。他有时出现在电视节目和‘装甲部队广播’中，在十月六日的TV5电视报道里也相当突出（见第3章）。电话里他似乎愿意见面交谈，因为他认为，此后几十年关于屠杀的历史已被篡改、充满谎言。他特别指的是对他在机场袭击浦的指控。据他说，他试图保护浦免遭愤怒的‘乡村童军’暴民袭击，方法是向他们表明浦已经受到了应有的严厉对待。这与他数次公开给出的托词完全相同。我想与他见面，以便进一步追问。不幸的是，他找不出时间，最终似乎也没有兴趣与我见面。无论如何，这类公众人物通常都已为采访准备好一套标准答案，因此我决定不再追究。30

[P043] 英文原文：

Another police officer I met was the former deputy police inspector of the local police district where TU was located. He was heavily involved in many actions that day, including leading the local police into TU and conducting a thorough inspection of the campus after the incident. When I contacted him by telephone, even though I told him who I was in 1976 and explained the purpose of the interview, he was cordial because, as it turned out, he did not recognize me. But the moment we met face to face, he did—and suddenly turned cold. Unwilling to say anything substantive, his standard answer was that he did not know, did not see, or could not confirm or deny anything about the massacre. It was a dismissive gesture to end the conversation, similar to the elder professor’s excuse. Nevertheless, I observed that he avoided eye contact throughout the brunch meeting. Did his action hint at his shame? Or was it a defensive shrug?

中文译文：

我见过的另一名警官，是法政大学所在地警区的前副警察局长。他深度参与了当天许多行动，包括率当地警方进入校园，以及事件结束后对校园进行彻底搜查。我打电话联系时，虽然告诉了他自己1976年的身份，也解释了采访目的，他仍态度友好——后来才知道，原来他没有认出我。但我们面对面见面的那一刻，他立刻认出了我，态度也骤然冷淡。他不愿说任何实质内容，只用标准答案应付：不知道、没看见，或者无法确认也无法否认有关屠杀的任何事情。这是一种带着轻蔑结束谈话的姿态，与年长教授的借口相似。不过，我注意到整个早午餐会面期间，他都避免与我目光接触。这暗示他感到羞愧吗？还是一种防御性的耸肩？

[P044] 英文原文：

Another witness—let me call him Sawat—had given testimony to the police that was quite damaging to the students but insisted, when we met in 2006, that he never said a word to the police. He did not even remember going near TU that day, he said. He knew about the incident, but it did not register as an important event in his memory or personal experience. In my opinion, he seemed genuine and honest, though I doubt that the police had any reason to fake Sawat's or the intelligence sergeant's testimonies. If the testimony were true, how should we make sense of Sawat's denial or lost memory? Was this another case of altering or purging an undesirable memory, subconsciously or otherwise, to come to terms with his later career and life? Although the intelligence sergeant's memory may have been altered to a great extent, he never denied witnessing the massacre. In fact, he acted as if he still remembered the day vividly. It is hard to believe that Sawat would completely deny any experience of the incident. It is possible that the event had no relevance to his life either then or now, and therefore faded away. Of course, it is also possible that he simply lied.

中文译文：

另一名证人——姑且称他为萨瓦（Sawat）——曾提供对学生相当不利的警方证词，但我们在2006年见面时，他坚称自己从未对警方说过一句话。他说甚至不记得那天靠近过法政大学。他知道发生了这起事件，但事件并未作为重要经历进入他的记忆或个人经验。在我看来，他显得真诚坦率，尽管我怀疑警方有什么理由要伪造萨瓦或情报中士的证词。如果证词是真的，那么我们该如何理解萨瓦的否认或记忆遗失？这是否又是一个为了与后来的职业和生活达成和解，而在潜意识中或有意改变、清除不愿面对的记忆的案例？尽管情报中士的记忆可能发生了很大改变，他从未否认自己目睹屠杀。事实上，他表现得仿佛仍对当天记忆犹新。很难相信萨瓦会彻底否认自己经历过此事。或许事件无论当时还是现在都与他的生活无关，因此渐渐淡去。当然，也可能他只是在撒谎。

[P045] 英文原文：

Another suspicious testimony is that of a leftist defector. Among the 224 people who testified to the police, only two were leftists. One was an activist who had finished college and become a teacher at a local public school in a northeastern province of Thailand before October 1976. He later earned a law degree and was a practicing lawyer when we met in 2006. According to him, he tried to flee right after the massacre. But, lacking contacts in the CPT network, he decided to escape to Laos by himself. He was arrested by the Lao authorities as soon as he crossed the Mekong River. After an ordeal of several months in a Lao prison, he was released but sent back across the river to Thailand by himself. He did this successfully without being arrested on the Thai side. To return to his teaching job, however, he had to turn himself in to the Thai authorities in that province. He did and was interrogated heavily before being released. He insisted that he had never given testimony to the police or any authority in Bangkok. I showed him the photocopy of his 1976 statement to the police. He examined it thoroughly, as a lawyer would do. Then he pointed out several suspicious points. The statement was dated at the time he was detained in Laos. A few signs suggested that the document had not been recorded or typed by the same person, probably not even on the same occasion but pasted together afterward. He admitted to being interrogated by the authorities but not the ones whose signatures appeared on the pages I showed him. Above all, he insisted that the interrogation he had faced was about his escape to Laos after the massacre; the testimony I showed him was all about the radical movement and the leftist groups he participated in from 1973 to 1976. His argument was convincing, though I was not able to verify its details, such as whether he went to Laos. If his statement to the police was falsified, then the denials by Sawat and the intelligence sergeant may not be entirely false either, and other police statements may also be in doubt.

中文译文：

另一份可疑证词来自一名脱离左翼的人。在向警方作证的224人中，仅有两名左翼人士。其中一人曾是活动者，1976年10月前大学毕业，在泰国东北某府的公立学校任教。后来他取得法律学位；2006年我们见面时，他是一名执业律师。据他说，屠杀后他立即试图逃走。但由于在泰国共产党网络中没有人脉，他决定独自逃往老挝。渡过湄公河后，他立刻被老挝当局逮捕。在老挝监狱受了几个月的折磨后，他获释，却被送回河对岸，让他自己返回泰国。他成功入境，未被泰国方面逮捕。然而，为了回到教师岗位，他必须向该府的泰国当局自首。他照做了，在遭受严厉审讯后获释。他坚称从未向曼谷的警方或其他当局提供证词。我向他展示了1976年警方陈述的复印件。他像律师一样仔细审阅，指出几处疑点：陈述的日期正是他被拘押在老挝的时候；一些迹象显示文件不是同一人记录或打字，甚至可能不是同一次制作，而是事后拼接。他承认曾被当局审讯，但审讯者不是我出示文件各页签名的那些人。更重要的是，他坚称当时的审讯涉及屠杀后逃往老挝的事情；我展示的证词却全部关于1973至1976年他参加的激进运动与左翼团体。他的论点令人信服，尽管我无法核实细节，例如他是否真的去过老挝。如果他的警方陈述是伪造的，那么萨瓦和情报中士的否认也可能并非全然虚假，其他警方陈述同样可能值得怀疑。

[P046] Patterns of Excuses and Observations

中文译文：借口与观察的模式

[P047] 英文原文：

The memories and voices of the perpetrators of the October 6 massacre were discredited and silenced by the changing political conditions and public perceptions in the decades that followed. Those related in this chapter represent a range of their memories, as they reported them to me.31 Yet most, including those who felt bitter and betrayed, insisted that their actions in the past were right and justified. Some offered explanations and excuses but no shame. None showed remorse. The commander insisted that it was a glorious day, not the dark one the public perceives it to be nowadays. Only the intelligence sergeant showed some sign of guilt and shame.

中文译文：

十月六日屠杀施害者的记忆和声音，在随后几十年变化的政治条件与公众观念中失去公信力，也遭到压制。本章记述的人物，展现了他们告诉我的一系列不同记忆。31 然而大多数人，包括那些感到苦涩和被背叛的人，仍坚称过去的行为正确而正当。一些人给出解释和借口，却没有羞耻感。没有人流露悔意。指挥官坚持认为那是光荣的一天，而不是今天公众眼中的黑暗日子。只有情报中士表现出些许内疚和羞愧。

[P048] 英文原文：

The conundrum is thus to understand how these people have dealt with their unforgetting over time. What were the reasons they gave to themselves to justify their actions? The patterns in their excuses were discernable and rational. Their language facilitated their excuses and justifications and became an integral part of the barbarization and cruelty, exactly as James Dawes observed in his interviews with war criminals.32 It is indeed alarming that these kinds of rational excuses and language are acceptable in Thai society. What are the ideological or discursive and the social or familial environments that provide the fertile conditions for these excuses to persist?

中文译文：

因此，令人困惑的是，怎样理解这些人如何随时间应对自己的‘无法遗忘’（unforgetting）状态？他们向自己提出什么理由来证明行动正当？他们的借口呈现可辨认、具有理性的模式。他们使用的语言为借口和辩护提供便利，并成为野蛮化与残酷行为不可分割的组成部分，正如詹姆斯·道斯（James Dawes）在采访战争罪犯时观察到的一样。32 尤其令人警惕的是，这类看似理性的借口和话语在泰国社会能够被接受。究竟是怎样的意识形态或话语环境，以及社会或家庭环境，为这些借口的持续存在提供了肥沃土壤？

[P049] 英文原文：

First, many argued that their actions must be understood within the specific context of the past. No one should judge them right or wrong retrospectively according to the values or understandings of the present day. Suddenly they were historians! RG1 even explained to me a historian’s approach to the past. It was a clever argument that made their actions “relatively” right or wrong, depending on context and the political values used to judge them. In other words, they argued that the normative values for crime, politics, justice, and so on, should be suspended, that we should allow the specific circumstances to override them. Such moral relativity hinges on the continuing ambiguity surrounding the massacre, the absence of a just accounting that could have established the necessary norms, legally, socially, and politically. Thai society has thus far provided the conditions that allow such ambiguity to exist.

中文译文：

第一，很多人认为，必须在过去的特定情境中理解自己的行为。任何人都不应根据今天的价值观或认知，事后判断他们的是非。他们突然都变成了历史学家！RG1甚至向我解释历史学家研究过去的方法。这是一种巧妙论证，使他们的行为根据情境与用于判断的政治价值而变得‘相对’正确或错误。换言之，他们主张暂停适用于犯罪、政治、正义等问题的规范价值，让具体情境凌驾于这些规范之上。这种道德相对性依赖屠杀持续存在的模糊性，也依赖缺乏公正的责任追究——若有后者，便可能从法律、社会和政治上建立必要的规范。迄今，泰国社会仍提供使这种模糊状态得以存在的条件。

[P050] 英文原文：

Second, today, the main justification for their actions is the need to protect nation, religion, and king—the three ideological pillars of Thai-ness. They killed for a higher purpose, for reasons that took precedence over individual lives. For them, the enemy in 1976 was the communists, the purported Vietnamese aliens, or a subhuman class of beings. They did not see the victims as individuals like themselves. This rationale implies that they did not kill in rage or ignorance, and that the outcome justifies the brutality as long as Thais still subscribe fanatically to the ideology of Thai-ness.

中文译文：

第二，如今他们为行动提供的主要理由，是保卫国家、宗教与国王——构成‘泰国性’意识形态的三大支柱。他们为更崇高的目的而杀戮，认为这些理由优先于个体生命。对他们而言，1976年的敌人是共产主义者、所谓的越南外来者，或某种次人类。他们不把受害者视为与自己一样的个人。这套理由意味着，他们不是在愤怒或无知中杀人；只要泰国人仍狂热信奉‘泰国性’意识形态，结果就能为残酷行为辩护。

[P051] 英文原文：

Third, some of them argued that both they and the victims were too young and immature to deal with such a complex political situation. They were all pawns. I believe that they kept telling themselves this to deflect the moral censure to their patron, the mastermind, who, in their view, should be held accountable and take the blame. This argument is reasonable because it was true to some extent. In arguing this way, however, they implicitly acknowledged their guilt. Perhaps they were trying to appease me. Yet they deflected their guilt to others as if they had naively and absentmindedly committed an action. It is a pitiful excuse. It shifts the guilt to powerful people in high places who, in Thailand at least, may never be identified or held accountable.

中文译文：

第三，一些人辩称，自己和受害者都太年轻、太不成熟，无法应对如此复杂的政治局势。他们都是棋子。我相信，他们不断对自己这样解释，是为了将道德谴责转移到庇护他们的幕后策划者身上；在他们看来，那人才应负责并承担指责。这个论点并非没有道理，因为它在某种程度上属实。然而，采取这种论证时，他们实际上也隐含地承认了自己的罪责。或许他们是在安抚我。但他们把自己的过错推给别人，仿佛自己只是在天真、漫不经心间做出了行动。这是一个可悲的借口。它把罪责转移给高位有权势的人，而在泰国，至少这些人可能永远不会被指出身份或追究责任。

[P052] 英文原文：

Apart from the changed memories and patterns of excuses, a few additional issues deserve serious examination. The first concerns the modification of memories to minimize the haunting presence of the past. Was the case of the intelligence sergeant an exceptional or a typical one for individual memory change in the political and cultural context of Thai society? Was it a microcosm of the broader social memory of the 1976 massacre in Thailand as well, and if so, in what ways? After all, as discussed in chapter 8, people's memories slid in tandem with changing political conditions so that they could live with the present and move on. But no study to date helps us understand the extent to which memories were altered in the case of the massacre. We do not yet understand the specific political, cultural, and ideological factors that we should being paying attention to.

中文译文：

除了记忆的变化与借口的模式，还有一些问题值得认真考察。第一个问题涉及通过修改记忆，尽量减轻过去挥之不去的纠缠。情报中士的案例，在泰国政治文化背景下，是个人记忆变化的特殊例子，还是典型例子？它是不是泰国社会有关1976年屠杀更广泛社会记忆的一个缩影？如果是，又体现在哪些方面？毕竟，如第8章所述，人们的记忆随着政治条件变化而滑动，以便适应当下并继续生活。但迄今没有研究帮助我们理解，屠杀事件的记忆在多大程度上发生了改变。我们还不清楚究竟应该关注哪些具体的政治、文化和意识形态因素。

[P053] 英文原文：

A second issue concerns the culture of law and punishment in Thailand. The hierarchical status of individuals matters very much in regard to the extent to which a wrongdoer should be protected or held culpable. On the one hand, the Red Gaurs, most of whom were from the lower class and looked down on as uneducated failures, bore the burden of blame and came to represent the violent vigilantes. On the other hand, this was not the first time that people with high social status, power, or wealth have gotten away with major and minor wrongdoing, even crimes.33 As with the massacre, most of these cases escaped scrutiny because of ambiguity, secrecy, the state's censorship and misinformation, ideological cover-ups, bad excuses, and outright suppression. The public is not willing to pursue justice because of fear. Practically and institutionally, impunity remains an integral element of the rule of law in Thailand.34

中文译文：

第二个问题涉及泰国的法律与惩罚文化。在决定应当多大程度上保护违法者，或追究其责任时，个人所处的等级地位极其重要。一方面，‘红牛’成员多来自下层阶级，被看作缺乏教育的失败者，他们背负了指责，成为暴力私刑团体的代表。另一方面，地位显赫、拥有权力或财富的人逃脱大小过错甚至罪行的追究，早已不是第一次发生。33 与屠杀一样，大多数案件由于模糊不清、保密、国家审查和虚假信息、意识形态遮掩、拙劣借口以及直接镇压，而逃过审查。公众因恐惧而不愿寻求正义。在实际运作及制度层面，逍遥法外仍然是泰国法治不可分割的一部分。34

[P054] 英文原文：

A third issue is about our knowledge of the right-wing movement in 1976, which could shed light on subsequent cases. It is understandable when the Red Gaurs complained about becoming a convenient target of social censure. Their bitterness at the “superior” above Sutsai is certainly justified. Even though they may appear to be operating independently from one another, the Red Gaurs, the Patriotic Goons, and other pressure groups (such as Nawaphon and the Housewife Clubs) could be different branches of an orchestrated movement. Each of them performed certain roles and took certain kinds of political actions, from vigilantism and the paramilitary provocation to the mass-based and issue-specific organizational directives. The ISOC and the “superior” seemed to have their hands in all these branches, namely, Sutsai for the Red Gaurs, The commander for the fringe paramilitary groups, Watthana for Nawaphon, and Chamlong for other right-wing civic groups.35

中文译文：

第三个问题是我们对1976年右翼运动的认识，这可能有助于理解后来的类似案例。‘红牛’抱怨自己成为社会谴责的便利目标，是可以理解的。他们对素赛之上的那位‘上级’感到苦涩，当然也有道理。尽管‘红牛’、‘爱国流氓’和其他施压团体（例如纳瓦蓬组织（Nawaphon）和主妇俱乐部）表面上彼此独立运作，却可能是一场统一策划的运动的不同分支。各自承担特定角色，实施不同类型的政治行动，从私刑式执法、准军事挑衅，到群众基础上的组织指令和针对具体议题的行动。内部安全行动指挥部（ISOC）及那位‘上级’似乎都在操控这些分支：素赛负责‘红牛’，指挥官负责边缘准军事团体，瓦他那（Watthana）负责纳瓦蓬，占隆负责其他右翼公民团体。35

[P055] 英文原文：

Finally, during my encounters with these right-wingers, I always talked with them about the country at the present time: what they thought were major problems or the most serious dangers Thailand was facing today. Without exception, the former perpetrators of the 1976 massacre all pointed to the United States and capitalism. In the 2000s when I talked with them, the economic crisis of 1997 was still fresh in their minds; they believed it was the result of Washington’s conspiracy to undermine the rise of Asia, including Thailand. They were also concerned about American dominance in the world since the 9/11 tragedy. The idea of the US threat in leftist discourse during the Cold War was, however, different from that shared by Thais of all political shades in the post–Cold War environment. The former was based on the vision of a desirable future, for a radical change beyond capitalism. The latter is based on a nationalist dichotomy, West versus Thai (and East). For conservative Thais, Thai-ness was always under threat—from the communists during the Cold War and from the United States and the West in the post–Cold War. The anticapitalism discourse of recent decades is decidedly conservative in its desire for an unchanged future. But as it turns out, as discussed in chapter 10, many former radicals and these right-wing elements share the same ideas about today’s enemies.

中文译文：

最后，我与这些右翼人士见面时，总会与他们谈到当下的国家：他们认为什么是泰国今天面临的主要问题或最大危险。无一例外，1976年屠杀的昔日施害者都指向美国与资本主义。2000年代我与他们交谈时，1997年的经济危机仍在他们脑海中记忆犹新；他们相信这是华盛顿策划的阴谋，意图遏制包括泰国在内的亚洲崛起。他们也担忧美国在‘9·11’悲剧后对世界的支配。不过，冷战期间左翼话语中的美国威胁，与冷战后各种政治立场的泰国人共有的美国威胁观念并不相同。前者建立在一种理想未来的愿景之上，追求超越资本主义的激进变革；后者则建立在民族主义的二分法上，即西方对泰国（以及东方）。对保守派泰国人而言，‘泰国性’始终受到威胁——冷战时期是共产主义者，冷战后则是美国与西方。近几十年的反资本主义话语，其追求未来保持不变的愿望，显然是保守主义的。不过正如第10章所讨论的，许多昔日激进活动者与这些右翼分子对当今敌人竟然抱持同样的想法。

[P056] Encounter with the True Blue

中文译文：与坚定王党分子的相遇

[P057] 英文原文：

My most intriguing encounter with the right-wing perpetrators of the massacre was one of the first (I interviewed him in 2000), but the last that I fully understood: General Uthan Sanidvongse, the army lieutenant colonel in charge of radio propaganda against the radical students from mid-1975 until after the October 6 massacre in 1976. He was probably “the” most infamous propagandist in modern Thai history. In this “psychological warfare,” the phrase he used to characterize his work, apart from ideological indoctrination, he also planted false information, spread vicious rumors, threatened the dissenters, and dehumanized opponents. Hatred filled the airwaves. The ultimate message was that the radicals were proxies of the Vietnamese communists and they planned to overthrow the monarchy. His broadcast, Yan Kro, was the main culprit, perhaps even more than Dao sayam, because of the allegation that spread like a wildfire on the eve of the massacre, that the students had hanged the crown prince in effigy. During the night of October 5, he called on the right wing to punish the radical students resolutely. Even though he did not fire a single shot and was nowhere near TU, he was, in my opinion, one of the top people responsible for the October 6 massacre because, like the hate media in the 1994 Rwanda genocide, were it not for his broadcast, the massacre might not have happened.

中文译文：

我与屠杀的右翼施害者最耐人寻味的一次会面，是最早的访谈之一（我在2000年采访了他），却也是我最后才充分理解的一次：乌坦·萨尼旺将军（General Uthan Sanidvongse）。他在1975年中至1976年十月六日屠杀之后，作为陆军中校负责针对激进学生的广播宣传。他或许是泰国现代史上最臭名昭著的宣传家。在他称为‘心理战’的工作中，除意识形态灌输之外，他还散播虚假信息、恶毒谣言，威胁持不同政见者，将对手非人化。电波中充满仇恨。最终传达的信息是，激进派是越南共产主义者的代理人，计划推翻君主制。他的‘装甲部队广播’（Yan Kro）是主要罪魁祸首，或许比《Dao sayam》还要严重，因为屠杀前夕，有关学生以模拟绞刑嘲弄王储的指控如野火般蔓延。十月五日夜间，他号召右翼坚决惩罚激进学生。尽管他一枪未开，人也完全不在法政大学附近，但在我看来，他是十月六日屠杀的主要责任人之一：如同1994年卢旺达种族灭绝中的仇恨媒体一样，如果没有他的广播，这场屠杀或许不会发生。

[P058] 英文原文：

After the massacre, the broadcast under his command was no longer needed. He remained active as a newspaper columnist for about six months, however. With the downfall of the ultraroyalist Thanin government, Uthan faded away from public attention.36 He never gave interviews, wrote, or said anything in public about the massacre. No explanation, no complaint, nothing. His complete withdrawal from the public made people assume that he had already died. When I searched for him in 2000, however, I found that he was in fact alive and living in the place listed in the telephone book at the time. All I needed to do was look him up in the Yellow Pages and give him a call. Uthan recognized my name when I introduced myself over the telephone. He even asked me how I was doing in the United States. Regarding the interview, at first he refused, saying that the mission he had been assigned had been accomplished, and he did not care what people thought about him. When I persisted, he graciously accepted my request. In retrospect, he wanted to talk.

中文译文：

屠杀之后，他指挥的广播不再有存在的必要。然而，他仍以报纸专栏作家身份活跃了约半年。随着极端保皇派的他宁政府垮台，乌坦逐渐淡出公众视线。36 他从未就屠杀接受采访、写作或公开发言。没有解释，没有抱怨，什么也没有。他彻底退出公共生活，以至于人们都以为他已经去世。然而2000年我寻找他时，发现他其实还活着，就住在当时电话簿列出的地址。我只需翻查黄页，打一个电话。电话中我自我介绍时，乌坦认出了我的名字，甚至问我在美国过得如何。对于采访，他最初拒绝，说交给他的任务已经完成，根本不在乎人们怎样评价他。经我坚持，他客气地答应了。回头看，他其实是想说话的。

[P059] 英文原文：

On our meeting at his residence, he established the rules for the interview: no tape recording. “Let’s have a conversation,” he said. As it turned out, it was neither an interview nor a conversation. It was mostly a monologue and continued for more than two hours. I began by telling him about this book project. He then set out another rule—no note-taking either. “This is just a conversation,” he insisted. It can be summarized easily in that whatever questions I asked during those hours, he always responded with the same two answers. First, whenever I asked about himself—his background, his career, his ideas, or what he had done and why he had done it, including specifics about the massacre—his responses were always about how grateful he and his clan were to the Chakri kings, from King Chulalongkorn (r. 1868–1911) to King Bhumibol. Second, no matter what I asked about Thailand—politics, the military, the situations in 1975 and 1976, his broadcast, comments on Thai society, that is, anything beyond himself—his answers were always about the significance and the indispensability of the monarchy for the country. Each question took about half a minute or less. The answers took about ten minutes each time. No matter how differently I rephrased or reframed my questions, his answers remained the same, almost verbatim every time, as if they were played from a recording. Out of frustration, toward the end, I even posed a few sarcastic questions about his behavior. His responses remained the same, expressed in the same stern voice with the same stern expression.

中文译文：

我到他家里见面时，他先规定访谈规则：不能录音。‘我们就聊聊天’，他说。结果这既不是采访，也不是对话，基本上是他一人的独白，持续两个多小时。我先向他介绍写书计划。他随即增加一条规则——也不能记笔记。‘这只是一次谈话’，他坚持说。整个过程很容易概括：不管那几个小时里我问什么问题，他总用同样两种回答。第一，每当我问及他本人——家庭背景、职业经历、思想，或者做了什么、为什么做，包括有关屠杀的具体细节——他总是回答自己和家族多么感激却克里王朝历代国王，从朱拉隆功国王（1868—1911年在位）到普密蓬国王。第二，不管我问泰国的什么问题——政

治、军队、1975与1976年的局势、他的广播、对泰国社会的评论，凡是超出他个人的事情——他的回答总是君主制对于国家何等重要、不可或缺。每道问题不超过半分钟，有时更短；每次回答则需要大约十分钟。不论我怎样改变措辞或提问框架，他的回答始终如一，几乎每次一字不差，仿佛播放录音。最后，我实在沮丧，甚至提出几个讽刺他行为的问题；他的回答仍不变，语气依旧严厉，表情也同样严肃。

[P060] 英文原文：

The encounter seemed like a school principal reprimanding a small child. In retrospect, perhaps that was how he thought of me and how he prepared for the interview. I left in frustration thinking that it had been a mistake to come and listen to his sermon about the benevolence of the monarchy for Thai society AND for him and his family in particular. The two answers were so conventional, what Thai people have heard for years, what we are taught in school, what we hear from the media, at public events, in everyday life. I learned nothing about his memory of the massacre. Yet what lingered in my mind after that day and long afterward was not frustration but puzzlement. Why did he consent to this interview? What did he mean to convey? Did he mean this for me in particular or not? What if someone else had asked him the same questions? Was there or wasn't there anything in his words to do with the October 6 massacre at all?

中文译文：

那次会面像是一位校长在训斥小孩子。回头想来，也许他正是这样看待我的，也是这样为采访作准备的。我沮丧地离开，觉得自己此行是一个错误，只是来听他讲君主制对泰国社会、尤其对他和家族的恩惠。那两套答案实在太老套了：泰国人多年来一直听这些话，学校这样教，媒体、公共活动和日常生活中也反复听到。我没有了解到任何关于他对屠杀的记忆。然而，在当天以及此后很长时间里萦绕心头的，并非沮丧，而是困惑。他为什么同意采访？他想传达什么？这些话是专门说给我听的，还是不是？如果换成其他人问同样的问题呢？他的话究竟与十月六日屠杀有无关联？

[P061] 英文原文：

Was it simply the behavior of an old man? Unlikely. The conversations over the telephone and at the beginning of the meeting, when he greeted me in his home, were normal. He looked strong and younger than his age. Was it merely for the personal satisfaction of beating me up intellectually? Unlikely, because in Thai social context, he was my superior, higher than me in every respect: family background, age, wealth, recognition, and power. A superior does not need to respond to a request from a subordinate. He could have simply ignored my request as a trifle of no consequence to him. I believe the "interview" was a serious conversation he wanted to have.

中文译文：

这只是一个老人的行为吗？不太可能。我们电话交谈时，以及见面之初他在家迎接我时，交流都很正常。他看起来强健，比实际年龄年轻。他只是想在智力上击败我以获得个人满足吗？也不太可能，因为在泰国社会环境中，他是我的上位者，家庭背景、年龄、财富、社会认可与权力等各方面都高于我。上位者没有必要回应下位者的请求。他完全可以无视我的请求，把它当作一件不值一提的小事。我相信，这场‘访谈’是他认真想进行的一次谈话。

[P062] 英文原文：

After pondering this perplexing encounter for many years, I realized that Uthan might be the only perpetrator of the massacre who had spoken the whole truth, as he believed it, with the utmost honesty.37 It is fair to assume that the “conversation” took place exactly as he intended it to happen, as signaled by the rules he set out at the beginning. It is also reasonable to assume that he had read some of my writings in Thai about the massacre. When I told him that I was writing a book about memories of it, he must have speculated about what the message of my book would be and how it would be received. Then, in response, he offered me the two sermons—one about the monarchy and his family, the other about the monarchy and Thai society. The conversation was intended as a lesson, and a warning, to me and those whose views about the massacre might be similar to my own.

中文译文：

多年思索这次令人困惑的相遇后，我意识到，乌坦或许是唯一一位以极端诚实的态度说出自己所信全部真相的屠杀施害者。37 我们有理由认为，这场‘对话’完全按他所希望的方式进行，正如他开头规定的规则所显示的。也有理由认为，他读过一些我用泰文撰写的有关屠杀的文章。当我告诉他自己正在写一本关于屠杀记忆的书时，他一定会揣测书要传达什么信息、读者会如何接受。于是，他以两场说教回应我：一场关于君主制与他的家族，另一场关于君主制与泰国社会。对话的目的，是给我以及那些对屠杀持有与我相似看法的人上一课，发出警告。

[P063] 英文原文：

Whereas everyone else offered retrospective explanations, clever and pitiful excuses, boasts about their heroism, or subdued recollections they had tried to forget, Uthan needed no excuses or apologetic explanations. He made no pretense of being a historian, or someone else’s pawn, or a naïve operator who was used, then betrayed and discarded. He needed no silly or evasive deflection about where he was that morning or whether he carried a weapon. He did not need to modify his memory for the changing times or lie to himself in order to move on with his current life. He was so confident in what he did and why he did it that he had no self-doubt, let alone regret or remorse. The massacre was the culmination of his career and life. For him, time had probably stopped since that day in 1976. As a cavalry officer, he must think of himself as the king’s knight. He had no reason to be evasive about what was right and wrong regarding the massacre. Anyone who disagrees with him is simply wrong.

中文译文：

其他人都在事后提供解释、聪明或可悲的借口，夸耀自己的英雄气概，或讲述那些试图遗忘、已经变得低沉的回忆；乌坦却不需要任何借口或带着歉意的说明。他没有假装自己是历史学家、他人的棋子，或一个被利用、继而遭背叛抛弃的天真执行者。他无须愚蠢地、闪烁其词地转移话题，去谈那天早上自己身在何处、有没有携带武器。他不需要随时代变化修改记忆，也不必为了继续当下的生活而对自己撒谎。他对所作所为及动机充满信心，没有丝毫自我怀疑，更别说遗憾或悔恨。屠杀是他职业生涯与人生的顶点。对他而言，时间很可能从1976年的那天起就停止了。身为骑兵军官，他必然把自己看作国王的骑士。他没有理由在有关屠杀的是非上回避问题。任何与他意见不同的人，都是错的。

[P064] 英文原文：

The two sermons appeared unrelated to the massacre but in fact were all about it. Uthan wanted to battle with me head-on, without wasting time or making unnecessary excuses. Unlike most royalists, who denied the palace's involvement, he did not. The two sermons implicitly acknowledged the unspeakable truth about the monarchy and the massacre. He and I may agree on this fact. We simply draw completely opposite conclusions from it. I take it to incriminate the monarchy; he takes it as confirmation that the massacre was what the radicals deserved.

中文译文：

那两场说教表面上与屠杀无关，实际上全部都在谈它。乌坦想与我正面交锋，不愿浪费时间，也不想找不必要的借口。多数王党分子否认王室参与其中，但他没有。两场说教隐含承认了有关君主制与屠杀的、不能说出口的真相。他与我也许在这一事实上一致，只是得出了完全相反的结论。我认为这使君主制受到指控；他则认为这证明屠杀是激进派应得的下场。

[P065] 英文原文：

Uthan wanted the monologue to send a message to me that the students (including me) were wrong that day in October 1976. He wanted to confront me, like a powerful elder reprimanding a stubborn young troublemaker, to reaffirm that he was right; he had done the right thing for the country and for the monarchy. Decades later, I was still wrong and he was still right. He must have wanted to remind me that his view was easy to understand, and that most Thais do understand it. Only people like me are too stubborn to understand, and that is our error.

中文译文：

乌坦希望通过独白向我传达一条信息：1976年十月那天，学生（包括我）错了。他想像一位有权势的长辈训斥顽固的年轻闹事者一样，当面告诉我他是对的；他为国家、为君主制做了正确的事。几十年后，我依旧错，他依旧对。他一定想提醒我，他的观点很容易理解，大多数泰国人也确实理解；只有像我这样的人过于固执，不愿明白，而这正是我们的错误。

[P066] 英文原文：

Last but not least, Uthan's sermon suggests that I keep in mind that he is not alone in his beliefs. Many more people are on his side than on mine.

中文译文：

最后同样重要的是，乌坦的说教还在提醒我：他在信念上并不孤单。站在他这一边的人，比站在我这一边的人多得多。